

Anne Couvent's Ascending Lineage to Louis VIII, King of France

Based on the Genealogical Research of Roland-Yves Gagné and Laurent Kokanosky,
Heraldry Research and Artwork by John P. DuLong

Anne Couvent came to New France from Picardy with her husband Philippe Amiot / Hameau and two sons, Jean and Mathieu, in 1636. A third child, Charles, was born in New France. In addition, her nephew, Toussaint Ledran, the son of Louis Ledran and Charlotte Couvent, also settled in New France. Many Canadians and Americans descend from one of the Couvent sisters and thus from royalty.

Louis VIII, known as “the Lion,” was the son of King Philippe II “Auguste” and the father of St. Louis IX. He had a brief reign from 1223 to 1226. His wife, Blanche of Castile, would be regent of France twice, during the minority of St. Louis from 1226 to 1234 and again while he was on Crusade from 1248 until 1252.
